

Preface.....	ix
Chapter One The Fall of Western Civilization and the Rise of Multicultural World History.....	1
Early World Historians and the Idea of Progress.....	1
Termination of the Western Civilization Course.....	4
World History Texts from the 1920s to the 1940s.....	6
World History Texts in the 1960s.....	11
Rise of Dependency Theory.....	13
Wallerstein’s World-System and Critical Theory.....	16
Franz Boas’s Relativism and Marvin Harris’s Cultural Materialism.....	19
The Conversion of William McNeill: From “Rise of the West” to “Interactive Webs”.....	23
Cultural Relativism, Scientific Materialism, and Humanism Combined.....	27
The Exclusion of Sociobiology.....	32
Kants “unsocial sociability”.....	38
Progress and the State of Nature.....	42
Dynamic Man versus Reactive Man.....	45
The Ascendancy of Multicultural World Historians.....	51
Patrick Manning: It Takes an African Village to Write World History.....	56
Disparaging the West: Felipe Fernandez-Armesto.....	62
Chapter Two Eurocentrism over Sinocentrism.....	71
The Basic Empirical Claims of the Revisionists.....	71
The Two Arguments of Re-Orient	74
One Asian World System?.....	79
The Role of Colonial Profits.....	83
Trade, Power, and Liberty: the Secret of British Imperial Success.....	87
China’s “high-level equilibrium trap”.....	93
The “Geographical Limits” of China’s Post-1400 Extensive Growth.....	96

Was Eighteenth Century Europe following a Malthusian path?	102
Was traditional China a Low Fertility Regime?	108
Conclusion	115
Chapter Three Whence the Industrial Divergence?	117
The Basic Propositions of Pomeranz’s “Great Divergence”	117
Malthus was Born too Late in a World too New	123
End of the Old Malthusian Regime in England.....	130
Standard-of-Living Debate.....	136
New World Resources versus European Resources	140
Was Cheap Coal Sufficient or Necessary?.....	146
Dynamic Rather than Static Comparisons	151
Chinas Ecological Endowments and Imperial Windfalls.....	153
Chapter Four The Continuous Creativity of Europe.....	165
Hobson and the Eastern Origins of the West	165
Eurocentric Historians	167
Imitation, Innovation, and Invention	172
Revolution in Time.....	174
The Printing Revolution.....	179
The Science and Chivalry of Henry the Navigator.....	182
Columbus and the Cartographic Revolution	189
The Industrial Enlightenment.....	195
Goldstone’s “Happy Chance” versus Jacobs Scientific Ethos	199
Contingency versus Long Term Patterns	203
Europe’s Solo Act: A Mercantile-Militaristic State?.....	206
Military Revolutions in Europe 1300-1800	209
The Inter-State System.....	214
Greek Hoplites and the “Western Way of War”.....	219
Mercantilism and the Birth of Political Economy	222
Liberty and the States System	226
Chapter Five The ‘Rise’ of Western Reason and Freedom.....	231
The West is more than Wealth and Power	231
The Cultural Poverty of the Revisionists	239
The Cultural Richness of Max Weber	246

Judaism and its Contribution to Western Rationalism.....	254
Schluchter on the Genetic Developmental Dynamic of the West.....	260
Habermas and the Rationalization of Substantive Values.....	265
The Liberal Democratic Ideals of the West and its Historiography.....	269
 Chapter Six The Restlessness of the Western Spirit from a Hegelian Perspective.....	 285
Change without Progress in the East.....	285
Measuring Human Accomplishments.....	289
The Historiography of Europe’s Revolutions.....	297
Phenomenology of the Western Spirit.....	302
Hegel and the Geographical Basis of the “infinite thirst” of the West.....	308
Hegel and the Beginnings of Western Reason.....	312
Hegel on the “desire” of World-Historical Individuals.....	315
The Master-Slave Dialectic and its Historical Reference.....	318
Hegel’s Account of the State of Nature.....	325
Kojeve and the fight to the death for pure prestige.....	328
Spengler and the Faustian Soul of the West.....	333
McNeill and the Indo-European Roots of the West’s Warrior Ethos.....	338
 Chapter Seven The Aristocratic Egalitarianism of Indo-Europeans and the Primordial Origins of Western Civilization.....	 341
The Founding Fathers of the West: Democratic Citizens or Aristocratic Warriors?.....	341
Indo-Europeans as the “Other” of World History.....	345
The Distinctive Indo-Europeanization of the West.....	352
Chariots, Mycenaeans, and Aristocratic Berserkers.....	363
Aristocratic and Martial Traits.....	371
The Impact of Indo-Europeans on the Civilizations of the East.....	377
“Big Man” Feasting and the Origins of Inequality.....	380
Prestige-Seeking Chiefs.....	384
From Simple to Paramount Chiefdoms.....	388
“Eastern” Group-Oriented and “Western” Individualizing Chiefdoms.....	390

City-States: Sumerian versus Greek.....	399
The Autocratic Character of Mesopotamia and Egypt.....	402
The Epic of Gilgamesh is not a Heroic Tragedy	410
Chapter Eight The Emergence of the Self from the Western ‘State of Nature’ and the Conciliation of Christianity and Aristocratic Liberty
Christianity and Aristocratic Liberty	419
Fukuyama and the Megalothymia of the “first men” of the West.....	419
Why Hegel’s “Master” Must be Aristocratic.....	423
Kojeve and the “first appearance” of Self-Consciousness	428
Charles Taylor and Plato’s Self-Mastery	431
The Beginnings of Genuine Personalities in History	435
Nietzsche’s “Homer on Competition”.....	441
Arete and the Education of the Greeks.....	445
The Roman Aristocratic Link	456
The Germanic Barbarian Rejuvenation of the West	460
Feudalism: an Aristocratic Type of Rule.....	466
Charlemagne’s Continuation of the Western Tradition.....	470
Christian Virtues and Aristocratic Expansionism.....	475
Aristocratic liberty and the Rise of Representative Institutions	481
Cited works.....	489
Index	519