

	Introduction: Modernity as a Horizon	1
	1 Aims and Approach of the Present Study	1
	2 Chapter Outline	19
1	History and Historical Consciousness in Contemporary China: Political Confucianism, Spiritual Confucianism, and the Politics of Spirit	23
	1.1 Introduction: Enter the Ghost of Confucius	23
	1.2 Confucianism in Contemporary China: Between Historical Value and Present Interest	29
	1.3 Excursus on Zhang Xianglong	44
	1.4 Political Confucianism, Spiritual Confucianism, and the Politics of Spirit	51
	1.4.1 Jiang Qing's Constitutional Reordering of Confucianism	51
	1.4.2 Jiang Qing on Political vs. Spiritual Confucianism	54
	1.4.3 The Institutional Dimension of Spiritual Confucianism	58
	1.4.4 The Politics of Spirit: Tang Junyi and Mou Zongsan Encounter Hegel and Marx	65
	1.4.5 The Subject as Spirit, and Its Modern Discontents	81
	1.4.6 Concluding Remarks	100
2	New Confucian Thought in the Context of Twentieth-Century Chinese Intellectual History: Historical (Dis)continuity and Philosophy	104
	2.1 Introduction: Culture and the Semantics of (Dis)continuity	104
	2.2 New Confucianism and May Fourth: Spirit Against Discontinuity	126
	2.3 Modernity, Philosophy, and the Inheritance of Abstraction	144
	2.3.1 Feng Youlan's China's Road to Freedom and his Method of Abstract Inheritance	144
	2.3.2 The New Confucian Critique of (Communist) Modernity	152
	2.3.3 Philosophy and the Inheritance of Abstraction	180
3	Science, Philosophy, and Wisdom: The Modern Recategorization of Knowledge and Conceptual Tensions in the Thought of Xiong Shili and Tang Junyi	197
	3.1 Introduction: The Differentiation of Science and Philosophy in the 1923 Debate on Science and Metaphysics and Its New Confucian Aftermath	197
	3.2 Conceptual Tensions in the Thought of Xiong Shili and Tang Junyi	215
	3.2.1 Husserl on Science, Philosophy, and Wisdom	215
	3.2.2 The Tension between Identification and Differentiation in Xiong's and Tang's Outlooks on Science (Knowledge) and

	Philosophy (Wisdom) 221
3.2.3	Lopsided Identities in the Philosophy of Xiong Shili 234
3.2.4	The Sense of Transcendence and the Place for Spirit in the Philosophy of Tang Junyi 247
4	The Philosophical Consequences of Modernity: Faultlines of History in the Thought of Mou Zongsan 267
4.1	Introduction: Preliminary Remarks on Mou Zongsan's Oeuvre and His Relation to Kant 268
4.2	Mou's Early Work on Logic and Epistemology: Criticism of Dialectical Materialism and the Strategic Distance between Being and Thought 276
4.3	Mou's Double-Leveled Ontology: The Transcendental Distance between Fact and Value in the Light of the Tension between History and Thought 299
4.3.1	Mou and Wittgenstein on the Limits of the Sayable 299
4.3.2	Kant, Heidegger, Mou: Transcendental Subjectivity, Finitude, and the Value of the Thing-in-Itself 304
4.3.3	The Dialectical Logic of Self Negation in Mou's Political Philosophy: Social Mediation and the Formalization of the Subject 328
	Conclusion 348
	Bibliography 357
	Index 400