

Introduction: Interpretations of Wittgenstein, Religion and Interreligious Relations Gorazd Andrejč	1–32
“Being Near Enough to Listen”: Wittgenstein and Interreligious Understanding Mikel Burley	33–53
Wittgenstein and Ascriptions of “Religion” Thomas D. Carroll	54–72
Wittgenstein’s Later Philosophy as Foundation of Comparative Theology Klaus von Stosch	73–96
Wittgenstein’s Religious Epistemology and Interfaith Dialogue Nuno Venturinha	97–113
Showing the Fly Out of the Bottle: Wittgenstein’s Enactive Apophaticism and Interreligious Dialogue Sebastjan Vörös and Varja Štrajn	114–134
Radical Pluralism, Concept Formation, and Interreligious Communication Randy Ramal	135–156
Wittgensteinian Quasi-Fideism and Interreligious Communication Guy Bennett-Hunter	157–173
The God of the Intellect and the God of Lived Religion(s): Reflections on Maimonides, Wittgenstein and Burrell Daniel H. Weiss	174–193
Multiple Religious Belonging in a Wittgensteinian Perspective Rhiannon Grant	194–212
Names, Persons and Ritual Practices: Wittgenstein and the Way of Tea Paul Cortois	213–235
Name Index
Subject Index	