

'Sandblasting Marx' - A Review by Fredric Jameson	ix
1 Introduction	1
1.1 The problem	1
1.2 Retaining Marx? A preliminary account of his theory	4
1.3 The lacuna in contemporary social theory	8
1.4 On the method employed in this study	10
1.4.1 The choice to work with texts only	10
1.4.2 The focus on German-language texts	11
1.5 The structure of the study	13
2 Marx Yesterday: A Genealogy of Misconceptions	17
2.1 Marx in the theory of Social Democracy	21
2.1.1 The Erfurt Programme	21
2.1.2 Revisionism	30
2.1.3 Neo-Kantianism: a fortunate coincidence	39
2.1.4 Orthodoxy	42
2.1.5 Key elements of Marxian theory I: the schemes of reproduction ...	50
2.1.6 Key elements of Marxian theory II: the falling rate of profit	67
2.2 Marx in the theory of communism	78
2.2.1 The role of violence	79
2.2.2 The organisation of the party	85
2.2.3 The dictatorship of the proletariat	89
2.2.4 A creative evolution of Marxism?	95
2.2.5 Trotskyism - a lesser evil?	102
2.2.6 Key elements of Marxian theory III: imperialism	104

2.3	Marx in economic theory
2.3.1	Marx between economic paradigms
2.3.2	Neoclassical refutations of Marx	131
2.3.3	Adoption of the neoclassical approach by Marxists	143
2.3.4	Diffusion of the paradigm into neighbouring sciences	158
2.3.5	Key elements of Marxian theory IV: the theory of money
2.4	Marx in (German) sociology	181
2.4.1	The division of the world into norm-free functions and normative frames
2.4.2	Whence the predominance of the neoclassical approach in sociology?
2.4.3	Normativity as a placeholder for incomplete worldviews 194
2.4.4	The flaws are projected onto the symbolic figure Marx
2.4.5	Critique of the technocracy-hypothesis and of industrial
2.4.6	The sociological approach to social classes
	Key elements of Marxian theory V: classes	215
	Classes (and more) in Max Weber	*
	Classes in Helmut Schelsky
	Classes in Luhmann
2.5	'From L Marx to Heidegger': Social Philosophy
2.5.1	A categorisation attempt by Rene Konig
2.5.2	Confronting the philosophical history of idealism	249
	The influence of Fichte
	The influence of Nietzsche
	The influence of Hegel
	Vitalism and the philosophy of Weltanschauung	258
2.5.3	Rudolf Eucken as precursor
2.5.4	Georg Lukacs as mediator	277
2.5.5	Martin Heidegger as offshoot	294
	Heidegger and Marx	295
	Heidegger and nihilism
2.5.6	Niklas Luhmann's philosophy of systems	313
2.5.7	Key elements of Marxian theory VI: Marx and Hegel	319
	Marx as a critic of Hegel
	Hegelian Marxism: semantic displacements	327
2.6	Critical theory or the dissolution of critique in religion	335
2.6.1	Horkheimer's vitalism	336
2.6.2	Pollock's hermetic analysis of state capitalism	341
2.6.3	Adorno's quietist utopianism	347

	2.6.4	Key elements of Marxian theory VII: Marx's critique of religion	353
, /,	2.6.5	The critique of religion as a political issue	364
	2.6.6	Four theological views of Marx	367
		Rejection of 'atheism'	367
		Tolerance in spite of 'atheism'	369
		Religious socialism	371
		Excursus: critique of the theory of secularisation	375
		The separation of religion and politics	388
	2.6.7	Walter Benjamin's political theology	391
	3	Marx Today: Critique of Contemporary Philosophy	403
	3.1	Jurgen Habermas or the return of the philosophy of law
	3.1.1	Anthropological beginnings
	3.1.2	Transformation into rationality types	413
	3.1.3	The myth of 'normative foundations'
	3.1.4	Key elements of Marxian theory VIII: Marx and ethics	422
	3.1.5	Procedural structures	430
	3.1.6	Key elements of Marxian theory IX: Marx and law	446
3*2	3.2	John Rawls or the apotheosis of ignorance	453
	3.2.1	John Rawls as a neoclassical theorist	454
	3.2.2	Justifying Stakhanov	461
	3.2-3	The communitarian response	463
	3.2.4	Responses within post-1989 German philosophy	472
		Otfried Hoffe	473
		Wolfgang Kersting	475
		Axel Honneth	476
	3.3	Business ethics: a 'normatively substantial' social theory?
	3.3.1	Reasons for the rise of this discipline
	3.3.2	Theological business ethics	485
	3.3.3	Managerial business ethics	492
	3.3.4	Historicist business ethics	500
	3.3.5	The Hegelianism of business ethics	507
	3.3.6	The critique of globalisation as a placeholder	510
3.4	3.4	Neo-pragmatism or the persistence of Hegel	- 513
	3.3.1	The German reception of pragmatism as the index of a problem	514
	3.4.2	A transformation of German idealism?	518
	3.3.3	Neo-pragmatism and Marxism as hostile brothers	525
	3.3.4	The conservation of rationality and normativity in Marx	530

4 Conclusion: What Philosophy after Marx?	535
3.1 The reality check as a philosophical litmus test	536
4.2 Topology of social philosophy	54i
4.2.1 Kant's philosophical topology	54i
4.2.2 The overcoming of dualism in Hegel	542
4.2.3 The transformation of (Hegelian) philosophy in Marx	543
4.2.4 The transformation of (Hegelian) philosophy in pragmatism	546
4.2.5 Supemormativism: Philosophy twice transformed	547
4.3 The function and scope of theory after Marx	549
4.3.1 The avoidance of theory in critiques of Marx	550
4.3.2 Marx's theory is not a determinism	551
4.3.3 Marx's topic is civil society	552
4.3.4 Neoclassical redeployments within economic theory	553
4.3.5 The side-play of dialectics as discursive displacement	554
4.3.6 The task of a critique of normative social philosophy	555
3.4 Normative theory: ethics as a surrogate for explanation	557
Afterword to the English Translation	563
References	565
Person Index	657